THERE'S no doubt about it — life can be very tough for comedians. For some reason, they seem to get overlooked throughout the world, with society often not giving them the respect they deserve. Many famously spoke out, some in disparaging ways against their fellow comics. One of the most famous comedians, Martin Short, even voiced his displeasure in a recent NPR interview against Donald Trump's presidency. With Trump's first year in office complete, Short's words are more pertinent than ever. "It's the least he could do..." In a recent NPR interview, Short made it very clear how he feels about the new president. When the NPR host brought up that Trump is "not talking about free markets" and "not talking about free trade," the comedienne replied, “There’s no question about it — life can be very tough for comedians.” With all of the controversial things Trump has done since he was elected, Short makes a very valid point. It 570a42141b
