A: I installed de Jitter-Pack plugin for Chrome and it solved the problem. Today, I am releasing the source code for the next version of my open source web development environment, PySide. This release is mainly for IntelliJ IDEA users, but I also added a small change to support Visual Studio users (besides much more minor changes). The new source is on Github. The Git tree is available at github.com/evancharlton/PySide. This includes the docs. This is a major step for PySide development. It means that I have more time to work on the Docs and perhaps publish them as a book. The doc updates this week will include the new form designer! You can expect release notes about the major changes in the next few weeks. Download I hope you enjoy the new version! Please feel free to report any bugs you find via the bug tracker or github issues. Update on the Docs I have been working on the documentation and released a new chapter on the form designer, and now the default form designer is available in the next chapter. I will likely work on that next week. Update on PySide Next week, I will release a new version for IntelliJ IDEA users. If you are having trouble building PySide or have any issues, please let me know. Update on GitHub My personal Github is I am working on my project. I have some changes pending to support Qt5 and PySide2, but expect that Pyovm will support Qt5 soon. There is also more discussion on how to create a better interface for the PySide2 web GUI designer. Serum phosphate levels often fall in patients with a functioning pituitary tumour, partly as a result of pituitary hormone secretion, but also because of hypercalcaemia resulting from the excess production of parathyroid hormone by the tumour. As tumour hypercalcaemia is usually mild, the role of parathyroid hormone in tumour hyperphosphataemia has seldom been demonstrated. We report a case in which a 62-year-old man presented with
